THE CRAB

An old water color of the Crab at the Whaling Museum brings back memories. You don't have to be very old to have had the thrill of the 3 cent ferry ride across the Acushnet River. Back of the writer's recollection when the toll bridge did not meet all the demands of travelers across the river. In 10 years, between 1820 and 1830, many enterprising people, whose business engagements caused them to frequently cross from one side of the river to the other, sought for a more rapid means of communication than could be obtained by walking or riding over the bridge. From small beginnings of men who owned sailboats, and were willing to spend their time and earn a little money each day during the summer season, in ferrying merchants who were in a hurry from one side to the other, there came to be established a line which made frequent trips. The boats, of course, took only foot passengers, or perhaps once in a while single animals, but they furnished more rapid means of transportation than could be obtained by way of the bridge, and took then from one center of business to the center of the other town.

How frequently trips were made by these boats, or whether passengers were confined to the hours of daylight, it is not possible to ascertain. Enough has been shown, however, to show that the owners or captains of the sailboats were alive to the main chance and took the best means in their power to attract customers. They carried bells on their boats, and as they came near the wharves which were the starting points on either side of the river, the ringing of the bells notified possible passengers that the boats were ready to take them across.

At one time a horse boat carried passengers across the river. The horse boat was one where the motive power of propulsion was furnished by one or more horses walking on a tread mill and the wheels were in that manner made to revolve.

The first move for the establishment of permanent ferry communications between New Bedford and Fairhaven occurred in 1832. On March 8 of that year, an act of incorporation was granted to the "Proprietors of the New Bedford and Fairhaven Ferry." The incorporators were Ivory H. Bartlett, Asa Swift, Jr., Ezekiel Swain, William T. Hawes and their associates, all of whom were business men, wide awake and with a keen appreciation of the importance of more rapid communication between the thriving towns.

A little more than a year elapsed from the time that the act of incorporation was passed, before the ferry boat Acushnet was launched and ready for service. The place of starting on the New Bedford side was at the foot of Commercial Street, and its landing on the Fairhaven shore at the foot of Cedar Street, which was the main thoroughfare at that time.

How long the Acushnet remained in service is not definitely known, but it could not have been very long, for in the year 1836 the ferry boat Fairhaven, which soon became known as the Crab was brought from Philadelphia, Pa., by Captain Daniel Montague, who was then in the employ of the New Bedford and Fairhaven company.

COUNTY ROAD

The Crab

The boat was called the Crab on account of the peculiar manner of crossing the river. Because of her weak machinery she would make leeway almost as fast as whe would go ahead, especially when she got into the currents of the river and there was a strong wind blowing up and down the harbor. As a consequence the prow of the boat had to be continually turned up-stream and pursued a rather zig-zag course across the river.

With the opening of the Fairhaven branch railroad, the ferry boat Union arrived in the harbor. It had been built specially for the railroad company in New York, in anticipation of the absorption of the ferry line. The New Bedford starting point was removed to School Street and here a ferry house was erected. The ferry boat arrived in the Acushnet river in time to make a trip on Saturday, September 30, 1854, but a regular schedule was not in force until the following Monday, October 2. The boat continued in service till September 30, 1873, just 19 years from the time that she made her first trip.

Finally came the ferry Fairhaven to ply between this city and the town on the other

ENJOYABLE PERFORMANCE HELD

A very enjoyable performance was presented at the Mechanic St. Play House, located in the cellar of the new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Heuberger, on July 26th. Admission was by invitation only, as the seating capacity was somewhat limited, but every chair was filled and the audience numbered approximately twenty-five. The cast of players was the Misses Susan Erhard, Gale Heuberger, Ruth Heuberger and Linda Montgomery. Ushers and program distributors were the Misses Nancy Walker and Susan Pelson. Properties and lighting were in charge of Miss Susan Burnham.

Several skits were presented and after the performance, refreshments were served to the audience, whose enthusiasm and applause culminated in the repeating of the entire performance. It may be added that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Erhard were the stylish highlights of the audience. Mrs. Erhard wore a beautifully elaborate fringed Chinese shawl over a simple summer cotton and glittered impressively with shoulder length rhinestone earrings. Mr. Erhard was taste-

FOOD SALE AT TOWN BEACH

Cookie Reed and Joyce Harriman are having a food sale in the sun house at the town beach on Wednesday, August 11th from 10 AM to 3 PM. The proceeds are to go to the water carnival.

Here is a chance to give the Water Carnival a boost and enjoy it. The kids work hard all summer in preparation for this event and it is a good show. We hope that the food sale is a big success,and knowing our town, we know it will be.

YOUNG FRY DID IT THEMSELVES

The Juvenile Penny Fair, held on July 23rd, was a most successful affair. Master Francis Hyland was in charge. 863 pennies were taken in on cake table, punch, grabs, white elephants, fortune telling, games and a table of used comic books. A large committee made the affair the success it was, and much credit is due each and every one.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Conquest arrived Sunday from their home in Richmond Va. They, their daughter Star, and son Robert will spend the month of August in Mattapoisett. Bob has just returned from a European cruise with the NROTC

LOST ARTICLES

There are several lost articles at the police station that owners may retrieve by identifying same.

STREET CLEANING ACCOMPLISHED

A nice job of street cleaning which was accomplished recently is appreciated by us all. We have one of the prettiest towns in the country, we think, and it's great to see it sparkle. It was a good job and the results show it.

ENTERTAINING FATHER

Mr. & Mrs. Orum R. Kerst of Cannon St. are entertaining for 2 weeks, Mr. Kerst's father, Mr. Harry E. Kerst of Jersey City, New Jersey.

SEVEN INCH SHRIMP CAUGHT

There was an article in the "New Yorker" that shrimp up to 8 inches long were around New Bedford. My brother and I caught one 7 inches long. Jimmy Batcheller
